Bakhchisarai. General View. 1930

In Bakhchisarai he writes a series of landscape studies and does raw drafts and water color sketches for a genre picture "The Embroidery Branch of the First Collective of Weavers in Bakhchisarai" which writes after returning to Moscow.

A "rural" series of 1930 besides numerous landscapes includes images of domestic animals and birds. The works characteristic for this series are: "Hens", "The Cock in a Basket", "The Picture for Children".

In the same year he starts to write a portrait of A.S.Pushkin. Konchalovsky decides to represent the poet at the moment of his morning creative work, sitting on a green sofa in a shirt, having bent his naked legs in oriental manner. Preparing for the work on this picture, Konchalovsky makes some etudes of the naked female body on a background of a green sofa, studying parities of tones of a body and upholstery.

The work on the portrait proceeds all next year.

In the summer the artist lives in Barvikha near Moscow, then in the autumn goes to Leningrad and then to Ryazan where writes a series of landscapes.

The artist considers an oil etude – “Peter’s Small House in The Summer Garden” as one of the strongest things written in Leningrad.

In the end of the year the artist carries out sketches of the scenery and the suits for Ferrari’s opera “Four despots” (Goldoni’s plot) for the Experimental Theatre in Moscow and for Goldoni’s comedy “The Mistress of Hotel” for MHAT.

“...For a long time I desired to return the real painting to the stage, whence it was so hastily expelled to be replaced with so-called designs, already boring and almost obsolete. It would be desirable to create the scenery extremely laconic, sparing of details, but achieve thus such laconism which can excellently be combined with the theatrical reality, and scenic properties. It is necessary to give the theatre such, widely written pictorial scenery with which would merge – “grow into the painting” all the suits and original subjects being on a stage. Such scenery is quite possible as an experience of “Four despots” has shown “.

By Nikolsky - ...1936, p. 98

In 1932 he makes a trip to Leningrad to work on scenery for the State Academic Bolshoy Theatre.

In the autumn of 1933 he goes to Kutaisi. However the most part of the time since 1933 for 1935 the artist lives in Bugri where he writes the portraits of outstanding figures of Arts.
